Gifts in kind are gifts of personal, tangible objects with a date of gift equal to the date of delivery. Gifts with a fair market value of more than $5,000 should be counted at the value placed on them by qualified independent appraisers, as required by the IRS for valuing non-cash charitable contributions. Gifts of $5,000 or less may be reported at the value declared by the donor or determined by a qualified expert who is on the faculty or staff of the institution. As with real estate, prior to the acceptance of an in-kind gift, it must be determined that the gift will benefit MCA.
